

Duty of Candour Report 2023-2024

All health and social care services in the UK have Duty of Candour responsibilities. This is a legal requirement which means that when things go wrong and mistakes happen, the people affected understand what has happened, receive an apology and organisations learn how to improve for the future.

An important part of this duty is to provide an annual report about the duty of candour in our service. This short report describes how The Porterbrook Care Home has operated the duty of candour during the period from 1st April 2023 to the 31st of March 2024. We hope you find this report useful.

The Porterbrook care home is a 44-bed residential home across 2 floors. We provide residential dementia and residential care for older people who require support with day-to-day activities in a homely environment. We are passionate and driven to ensure our residents receive the care they require while living a happy and fulfilled life.

Within the last 12 months, there have been 14 incidents at the home, to which the duty of candour applied. These are where types of incidents have happened which are unintended or unexpected, and do not relate directly to the natural course of someone's illness or underlying condition.

Types of Unexpected or Unintended incidents specified within the legislation.	The number of people affected
Someone's sensory, motor, or intellectual function is impaired for 28 days or more.	0
Someone has experienced pain or psychological harm for 28 days or more.	0 person and in writing, and offered to meet with them and their families. We reviewed what happened and what if anything, went wrong to try and learn for the future.

If something has happened that triggers the duty of candour, our staff report this to the Home Manager who has responsibility for ensuring that the Duty of Candour procedure is followed. The Home manager records the incident or accident and reports it as necessary to the Care Quality Commission, the local contracting authority, the Regional Director, and the Quality Director, for the company. When an incident or accident has happened, the Home Manager and staff set up a learning review. This allows everyone involved to review what happened and identify changes for the future.

All new staff learn about the duty of candour at their induction. We know that serious mistakes can be distressing for staff as well as people who use care and their families.

In response to the residents who experienced harm, the injury or incident and circumstances around the injury or incident were discussed with the resident and, or their relatives, their care plans were reviewed along with any corresponding risk assessments such as falls risk assessments and skin integrity risk assessments. In some cases, additional measures were introduced including the use of falls equipment and pressure relieving equipment. At The Porterbrook we use lessons learnt to share with the staff team as well as other home managers what has been learnt and how practices may have changed to reduce the risk of future incidents or injury.

This is the sixth year of the duty of candour being in operation and it has helped focus our learning and planning for improvements as a service and as a company. It has helped us to remember that people who use our services have the right to know when things could be better, as well as when they go well.

As required, we have made this report available to the regulator but in the spirit of openness, we have published it to share with our residents and their relatives too.
