

All health and social care services in the UK have Duty of Candour responsibilities. This is a legal requirement which means that when things go wrong and mistakes happen, the people affected understand what has happened, receive an apology and organisations learn how to improve for the future.

An important part of this duty is to provide an annual report about the duty of candour in our service. This short report describes how The Porterbrook Care Home has operated the duty of candour during the period from 1st April 2024 to the 31st of March 2025. We hope you find this report useful.

The Porterbrook Care Home is a 44 bedded residential home across 2 floors. We provide residential dementia and residential care for older people who require support with day to day activities in a homely environment. We are passionate and driven to ensure our residents receive the care they require while living a happy and fulfilled life.

Within the last 12 months, there have been 7 incidents at the home, to which the duty of candour applied. These are where types of incidents have happened which are unintended or unexpected, and do not relate directly to the natural course of someone's illness or underlying condition.

In addition to the 7 incidents reported in the table below an additional 14 duty of candour letters were written and issued. These were completed within a couple of days of the incident but don't meet the full requirements of duty of candour as there were no effects lasting more than 28 days. Residents and their families were kept informed of the process and updated throughout.

Types of Unexpected or Unintended incidents specified within the legislation.	The number of people affected
Someone's sensory, motor, or intellectual function is impaired for 28 days or more.	0
Someone has experienced pain or psychological harm for 28 days or more.	0
A person needed health treatment to prevent them from dying.	0
A person needed health treatment to prevent other injuries.	0
The structure of someone's body changes because of harm/injury.	6
Someone's treatment has increased because of harm.	0

Someone's life expectancy becomes shorted because of harm.	0
Someone has permanently lost bodily, sensory, motor, or intellectual functions because of harm.	0
Someone has died.	1

When we realised the events above had happened, we followed the correct procedure. This means we informed the people affected, apologised to them in person and in writing, and offered to meet with them and their family. We reviewed what happened and what if anything, went wrong to try and learn for the future.

If something has happened that triggers the duty of candour, our staff report this to the Home Manager who has responsibility for ensuring that the Duty of Candour procedure is followed. The Home Manager records the incident or accident and reports it as necessary to the Care Quality Commission, the local contracting authority, the Regional Director, and the Quality Director, for the company. When an incident or accident has happened, the Home Manager and staff set up a learning review. This allows everyone involved to review what happened and identify changes for the future.

All new staff learn about the duty of candour at their induction. We know that serious mistakes can be distressing for staff as well as people who use care and their families.

In response to the residents who experienced harm, the injury or incident and circumstances around the injury or incident, were discussed with the resident and/or their relatives. Their care plans were reviewed along with any corresponding risk assessments such as falls risk assessments and skin integrity risk assessments. In some cases, additional measures were introduced including the use of falls equipment. At The Porterbrook we use lessons learnt to share with the staff team as well as other home managers, sharing what happened, what has been learnt, and how practices may have changed to reduce the risk of future incidents or injury.

Duty of candour informs our learning and planning for improvements as a service, and as a company. It has helped us to remember that people who use our services have the right to know when things could be better, as well as when they go well.

As required, we have made this report available to the regulator but in the spirit of openness, we have published it to share with our residents and their relatives too.
